

MARK CROCKER

BIOGRAPHY

Mark Crocker is internationally recognized as one of North America's best ventriloquists.

His unique ability to show off his skill in a variety of different settings account for his success across the continent. Mark's versatility is demonstrated by the cast of characters he deploys that leave audiences of all ages and backgrounds wanting more. Whether he uses a "magic marker" and a whiteboard, one of his puppets or even audience members, Mark delivers versatility, skill and most importantly, lots of laughs.

Mark Crocker was born in Hamilton, Ontario. At the age of 17, Mark taught himself this challenging art form called ventriloquism. Since 1977, he has been setting his mark with his unique live performances.

Mark's list of credits is as versatile as his shows. He has shared the stage with such notables as Jim Carrey, Long John Baldry, The Good Brothers, The legendary Crowbar, and King Biscuit Boy, CBC icon David Broadfoot, Patrick McKenna (Red Green Show, Traders), Singing Sensations Carol Baker, Ian Thomas, Jim Cuddy (Blue Rodeo), and the Trailer Park Boys.

Mark's television work is as much off the screen as it is on, since he is also a sought after consultant and master puppeteer. He has appeared in a variety of programs, such as a national Barq's Rootbeer commercial, Cooking with Comics, the Doc Series with Billy Ray Cyrus, and Comedy at Club 54, to name a few. Mark's big screen debut came with the film "Silence" from Universal Pictures (Directed by James Wah, director of Saw 1 & 2).

Mark showcases his talents at countless corporate venues, special events, festivals, fund raisers, comedy festivals and casinos.
